

Borough schoolchildren celebrate 100 days to go until the start of the Olympic Games at a book launch at The City Academy Hackney on 18 April

100 DAYS TO GO

THE borough marked 100 days to go to the Olympic Games on 18 April with good news about jobs, training and opportunities for young people.

It was revealed that 1,500 residents have been offered work with contractors providing cleaning, catering, retail, logistics and security services during the Games, with more jobs still available.

Cllr Guy Nicholson, Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the 2012 Olympic & Paralympic Games, said: "It is great to see this response. We wanted to make sure there were large numbers of local people working at the Games over this summer and we have achieved it. We know there are still jobs to fill and I would encourage anyone interested to check our website or to give the Ways into Work team a call. These jobs could certainly provide a stepping stone to permanent employment."

Hackney Community College (HCC) was also celebrating being at the heart of preparations for the London 2012 Games.

It has been selected as a key training location to prepare most of the 70,000 London 2012 Games Makers for 800 different volunteer roles during the Games. Ian Ashman, HCC principal, said: "We believe London 2012 offers a great legacy to the local area – and the college being the venue for the volunteer training is one more example of the benefits of the Games to Hackney."

Hackney schoolchildren also played their part in marking the 100 days milestone at the launch of 'Sam and Ruby's Olympic Adventure' written by children's author, Tony Bradman, and based on the creative ideas of young people from the borough. The front cover was designed by Our Lady's Convent High School, and the back cover by pupils from Horizon School.

Residents' awards

RESIDENTS have looked back on the past year and recognised those who went the extra mile to make a difference in their community.

Over 100 residents, who are involved in Tenant and Residents Associations (TRA) and other forms of community engagement, attended the annual event on 13 April.

This year's winners of the Hackney Homes Active Residents' Awards included its disability forum, which won group of the year; Gabriel Hardisty-Miller was named young resident of the year; and Terry Edwards collected the Ron Devoti award for services to Hackney.

The resident of the year honour went to Irene Lewington. She was nominated for her continuous involvement on her estate and willingness

"I feel overwhelmed and pleased to have won. I have lived in Hackney for over 83 years and I still love it" to regularly volunteer her time; assisting neighbours with hospital appointments; visiting those who have difficulty getting out; and being a pillar of strength for fellow residents.

Irene said: "I feel overwhelmed and pleased to have won. I have lived in Hackney for over 83 years and I still love it. We have the best parks in London and I love the Hackney people."

The evening opened with a speech from long serving resident and ex-TRA representative, Sid

Curtis, who highlighted his journey of involvement with the Council and Hackney Homes; the challenges faced; and the benefits of being a TRA member.

Dignitaries including Deputy Mayor of Hackney, Cllr Karen Alcock; Chair of Hackney Homes board, Rupert Tyson MBE; and Cabinet Adviser for Hackney Homes, Cllr Philip Glanville presented the winners with awards and thanked all the nominees for their dedication and hard work.

Cllr Glanville said: "There is a fantastic range of achievements in Hackney and I congratulate all the winners and runners up. These awards showcase the passionate commitment that Hackney Homes residents have for our borough and where they live."

Back to school for former pupil

POPSTAR Labrinth and artist Grayson Perry visited Stoke Newington School earlier this month.

Ex-pupil Labrinth admitted he was 'really nervous' to go back because he is now considered a role model for many young people.

Turner Prize-winner Grayson Perry, best known for his ceramic vases, also

Archbishop visits the borough

ARCHBISHOP of Westminster, the Most Rev Vincent Nichols, paid a visit to Hackney on 19 April to see the work Our Lady's Convent High School students are doing to help make the streets safer.

Sixth form pupils took the Archbishop on a walkabout and introduced him to shopkeepers who have signed up to the CitySafe campaign. It aims to show how young people can help build peace in their areas by developing relationships with neighbours and local business people. The Archbishop praised the work the girls had done, and said: "Don't ever lose this inspiration to serve others around you."

Introducing the new wardens

HACKNEY'S new Community Safety Wardens have had a number of successes since patrols began on 1 March.

Firearms, knives and drugs have been seized through joint operations with police units, and intelligence has been gathered through the development of relationships with residents and community groups.

The 12-strong team play a key function in Hackney's CCTV and Emergency Planning Service, acting as a point of contact for residents on matters of community safety.

The wardens can help to address a variety of environmental and safety issues affecting communities within the borough and they also have the power to issue Fixed Penalty Notices for a number of offences, including abandoned vehicles, noise abatement and enforcement and fly tipping.

Cllr Sophie Linden, Cabinet Member for Crime, Sustainability and Customer Services, said: "The new Community Safety Warden service is already achieving results through its combination of partnership working with the police and neighbourhood community groups as well as through daily operations and patrols. By working with the wardens, residents can play a part in making a positive impact on the community in which they live."

OVER 150 residents took part in an event aimed at encouraging young people to get more involved in their local community.

A range of activities and interactive workshops were on offer at The Urswick School, E9, on 11 April.

They included an X-Factor style video booth, which asked visitors to share their views on living in the borough; a youth-led photography workshop; an interactive BMX stand; and information on apprenticeships and 2012 job opportunities.

The event was also a chance to display the work of over 100 young people who took part in a five-week course, designed to offer an outlet for creative expression and an accredited qualification in photography.

David Adesanya said: "I had an interest in art and photography, but this course has taught

Key pieces from the exhibition will now move to Hackney Picturehouse, in Mare Street, as part of a wider project capturing the legacy of the London 2012 Games as seen through the eyes of the borough's young people.

Representatives from youth charity Skyway; Interlinks' cycle club; Hackney Homes estate safety team; The Youth Engagement Project (YEP); and Rising Tide also took part in the event, and offering a range of information and advice

Hackney Homes youth co-ordinator, Sonia Bradley, said: "We are pleased with the success of our very first Youth Involvement Day and the support received from local partners and young people in making the day a success. We hope that young people not only had fun on the day, trying out some of the free activities, but also registered for the apprenticeships and Olympic job opportunities on offer."

Community groups are being invited to register their interest now in taking part in the One Hackney Festival 2012

Join in festival fun

THE borough's many voluntary and community groups are being invited to register their interest now in taking part in the One Hackney Festival 2012.

The 2,000-strong festival parade will travel from Shoreditch Park to Clissold Park on 21 July, as part of celebrations to welcome the Olympic torch as it passes through the borough on its way to the opening ceremony on 27 July.

Cllr Guy Nicholson,

Cabinet Member for Regeneration and the Olympic and Paralympic Games, said: "This festival will give us the opportunity to showcase and celebrate all that is unique about Hackney, our diversity and creative talent, and what a brilliant way to welcome the Games to the East End of London. We can all have a key role in making the event a huge success. We will welcome participants from across London, the UK and from Rio de Janeiro – but at its heart, the event is all about Hackney." During the three months leading up to the festival, participants will have the chance to take part in music and dance workshops, and benefit from master classes in costume design. The parade will culminate in the arrival of the Olympic torch at Clissold Park. The symbolic moment will be broadcast globally. A community briefing session takes place at 5.30 pm on 23 April at Sutton House, 2-4 Homerton High Street, E9 6JQ. Any groups that want to take part can also register their interest at: getinvolved@keithkhanassociates.com

New recycling scheme gets green light

THE way Hackney recycles is set to change next year after plans aimed at reducing the amount of waste the borough sends to landfill were approved. Residents will no longer use a green box for their recycling, but place it in sacks collected from the kerbside. The changes to the Council's recycling will expand the service to an extra 14,500 properties, speeding up collections. Trials in Cazenove ward have resulted in an increase in recycling which, if mirrored across the borough, could save taxpayers £12million by 2020 and increase recycling rates to 34 per cent over the same period. Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "This decision is a major step forward for recycling in Hackney. This scheme makes it easier, quicker and cleaner to recycle and is the solution we've been looking for." The new service will be rolled out to all wards next spring and the Council will continue to provide food and garden waste collections for residents. Barbecue area in London Fields

RESIDENTS have backed Council plans to introduce a designated barbecue area in London Fields. The park is a big draw in the summer, but the sheer volume of numbers can put a big strain on the local environment. A huge amount of waste is generated and barbecues scorch the ground, leaving barren patches in the grass. As a result, the Council held a public consultation last year on proposals to restrict barbecues to a designated area, and nearly 80 per cent of people who responded said they were in favour of the move. Following a trial period last summer, London Fields now has a dedicated area where people can enjoy a barbecue if they use a stand. A metal bin for left-over disposable barbecues is also provided. Barbecues will not be permitted outside the designated area, which is by the southwest entrance nearest to Broadway Market. Anyone not using a stand will be asked to do so by Council staff, or put the barbecue out. Residents are also encouraged to dispose of their cigarettes, and recycle metal bottle tops, cans and bottles. Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "The park is there for everyone to enjoy, and we all need to treat it with respect and do our bit to show that we love London Fields." Tech City digital festival returns

TICKETS have gone on sale for a key event in the calendar of the Hackney-based creative and new media businesses that collectively form 'Tech City'. Over 10,000 people are expected to attend the second annual Digital Shoreditch Festival, which runs from 21 May to 1 June. The aim of the Council-supported event is to connect the diverse businesses and entrepreneurs clustered around Old Street roundabout – an area fast becoming an internationally renowned centre for the digital industry – to exchange ideas through a range of 200 events and activities. The programme includes talks, workshops, open studios, exhibitions, awards and networking evenings designed to 'engage, inspire and celebrate' East London's business community. One of the main draws is set to be 'Brand Day' which features big hitters such as Facebook, Foursquare, LivingSocial and Mother. There will also be an 'Inspire Day' focusing on helping young people to achieve their ambitions to work in the digital and tech industries. The festival will also feature winners in the Race for Apps competition, run by the Council and partners to create mobile phone apps that showcase Hackney ahead of the Games. Tickets cost £399 for a full festival pass, and £90 for a day. For more, visit: <http://digitalshoreditch.com/>

KNOW?

The story of Anne Frank

AN exhibition recounting the life of one of the most iconic victims of the Nazi Holocaust, Anne Frank, has opened at Empire 2, E8.

The free 'Anne Frank + You' exhibition takes a historical and contemporary look at her story. Anne's fate became internationally known – after her death in a concentration camp – with the publication of her diary in 1947. It documented her experiences in hiding during Nazi Germany's occupation of Holland during the Second World War.

The exhibition looks at Anne's writing and its themes of war, racial hatred, nationalism, human rights and the value of freedom and democracy. It puts them into context today through filmed interviews with British teenagers. At its heart is a replica of Anne's bedroom when she was in hiding with her Jewish family and friends in a Sheila Suso-Runge, chair of Hackney Community Engagement Board, said: "Anne Frank's story is one of the most tragic and inspirational to have emerged from the Second World War. We're delighted that this major exhibition is now open to all the community in the heart of Hackney."

"The story of Anne Frank, and the focus on challenging 21st century issues, will help ensure we heed the lessons of history."

The Anne Frank Trust (AFT), which put on the exhibition, draws on Anne's life and diary to challenge prejudice and reduce hatred, encouraging people of all ages to embrace positive attitudes, responsibility and respect for others.

The AFT delivers education, volunteering and exhibition programmes in schools, colleges, criminal justice institutions and local communities.

The free exhibition is on at Hackney Empire's new creative learning and community space, Empire 2; The Bullion Rooms, 117 Wilton Way, E8, until 3 May. It is open 9am-6pm, Mon to Fri; 10am-4pm, Sat; closed Sun.

Old Bill, new ideas

The new commander of Hackney police, Chief Superintendent Matthew Horne, not only places a big emphasis on catching criminals, but also on supporting victims of crime

CHIEF Superintendent Matthew Horne is delighted to be back in the borough as the new commander of Hackney police.

Matthew first served in the borough as a Detective Sergeant between 1998 and 2000, before moving onto a number of positions across the Met Police. Most recently he played a key role in helping develop the Met's response to the Leveson Inquiry into culture, practices and ethics in the press.

During his time away from the borough, Matthew maintained a keen interest in Hackney life and policing. He says: "I was based in Hackney in the late 90s and I remember it as one of the best places I've ever worked. It's such a vibrant place. I live in East London and it's great to be back working here at such an exciting time.

"The last 10 years has seen a reduction in crime in the borough, and it'll be my biggest challenge and my priority to continue that trend. The way we do that is by ensuring that fighting crime is the sole focus of everyone who works for Hackney police."

Matthew is impressed with the Safer Neighbourhoods partnership between police and the Council and he makes it clear that the initiative will continue to get more investment.

He explains: "Safer Neighbourhoods has been a resounding success and has made a big impact on the communities we serve. These teams will have more responsibility in the future and more staff and that can only be good for Hackney's communities."

“ Hackney's such a vibrant place. I live in East London and it's great to be back working here at such an exciting time ”

Matthew places a big emphasis on preventing crime and catching criminals, but he also points out the importance of supporting victims of crime. He says: "What on paper may seem like a low-level crime can have a huge impact on someone's life. The Safer Neighbourhoods approach is allowing us to refocus our efforts on the needs of victims, on care, and on how we keep them updated."

Curriculum Vitae: Chief Supt Matthew Horne
1970	Born in Crewe
1989-98	Joins the Met Police as a constable in Enfield
1998-2000	Becomes a Detective Sergeant in Hackney
2000-03	Works as a Detective Inspector with the Met's homicide team
2005-08	Detective Chief Inspector and then Detective Superintendent in the Met's Homicide & Serious Crime Command
2011	Detective Chief Superintendent, Senior Police Lead to Leveson Public Inquiry
	Takes over as Hackney commander

"Yes – I want to continue to drive down crime, but I also want the people of Hackney to be happy with the way we support them," he continues.

As a keen sports fan, Matthew is looking forward to the Olympic and Paralympic Games this summer, but Hackney's most senior police officer doesn't underestimate the task ahead for the police.

He says: "In terms of policing challenges, the Olympic Games and events like the BBC Radio 1 Hackney Weekend are right up there, but I'm really excited to be in an Olympic borough."

"We have a great team here and police officers from all over the UK are coming to support us so we'll be ready to play our part in keeping the Olympics safe and keeping Hackney safe. Any large event brings challenges for the police, but that's brilliant – bring it on," he continues.

Matthew always knew he wanted to join the police and he also had his eye on London at a very young age. He says: "My dad was a policeman and that must have influenced my thinking from a young age. He was surprised, but I don't know why – I'd always wanted to be a policeman! I remember too, when I was about nine, we came to London and I loved it. From then on I knew I'd come here."

Matthew is originally from Chester, but has lived in London for 20 years. He lives in East London with his family and is now in charge of 1,000 staff, including 750 police officers, working from Stoke Newington Police Station, N16.

THE GREEN GENIE

All your green questions answered

Q: I'd like to recycle my food waste, but I'm not sure what I can put out for collection. I heard that the Council can't recycle meat and bones – has that changed recently? Also, can I recycle nut shells?

A: Residents can now add cooked and raw meat, nut shells, fish, seafood shells and bones to their food waste recycling, which is then turned into compost to be used on Hackney's green spaces.

At the moment, the Council has a team of people going door-to-door in Hackney handing out free, compostable liners and taking orders for replacement blue kitchen caddies.

They should be able to answer any further questions about food waste recycling, but if you're stuck you can always e-mail the Green Genie.

Volunteers clean up the River Thames; HCC student Coleen Kinch (centre) with other Legacy Champions

Thames clean-up

STUDENTS from Hackney Community College (HCC) and BSix sixth form college spent a day knee-deep in mud clearing debris from the River Thames.

Pupils volunteered to take part in the river bank clean-up in Greenwich, as part of the Legacy Champions programme – a scheme inspired by the Olympic and Paralympic Games to help rejuvenate the 2012 host boroughs, which include Hackney. They joined forces with fellow Champions from other host borough colleges for the 27 March event.

HCC student, Coleen Kinch, 18, said: "I'm a proud Londoner and enjoyed the chance to help clean up the Thames to make it more attractive for visitors. I hope people will be inspired by our efforts and be motivated to look after their communities."

Sponsored by EDF Energy and delivered by youth action charity Envision, the Legacy Champions programme gives young people the opportunity to create positive change in their local area, through projects to tackle social and environmental issues.

HCC students are also working on their own initiative – a cultural workshop for primary pupils that aims to encourage them to celebrate Hackney's diverse ethnic communities.

HCC Principal, Ian Ashman, said: "This initiative is testimony to the spirit of our learners. They are proud of their community and through projects like this, are able to make positive changes that can benefit themselves and others around them."

Biodiversity Action Plan adopted in the borough

A NEW plan which outlines ways to improve the borough's environment by protecting and enhancing its wildlife has officially been adopted by the Council.

Hackney's Biodiversity Action Plan (BAP) identifies six priority habitats including its parks and built environment. It also identifies important species found in the borough – from the swift and honeysuckle to the jay bird and Maiden's blush moth.

By adopting the plan, the Council has made a commitment to deliver a series of actions to conserve wildlife in Hackney. This includes creating one hectare of wildflower meadow, running wildlife volunteering days, and requiring developers to install 'living roofs' on to new buildings.

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, said: "Improving biodiversity and protecting the animals and plants in Hackney is a priority for the Council. Over the coming years we will be working hard to ensure that we conserve and enhance the borough's wildlife."

In an urban area like Hackney, biodiversity plays a vital role in cleaning the air, reducing the effect of the 'urban heat island' (hot temperatures in summer) and helping to reduce the risk of flooding.

Hackney's green spaces cover 97 hectares of natural habitat such as woodland, meadow and rivers.

They are home to a number of important plants and animals including bats, house sparrows and Britain's rarest native tree – the Black Poplar.

A copy of the plan can be found at: www.hackney.gov.uk/biodiversity. For more details about park events in the borough visit: www.hackney.gov.uk/park-events

Hackney's a lead cycling borough

HACKNEY has been recognised as London's leading cycling borough in the 2012 London Transport awards.

The Council was recognised for its 'bike across the borough' scheme, which involved over 100 primary schoolchildren cycling six miles across Hackney to the Olympic Park; a cycle awareness training programme for HGV drivers; and the completion of a new walking and cycling route that links up five of the borough's parks with the Olympic Park.

Judges at the Transport Times sponsored awards were also impressed by Hackney's other cycling achievements since January 2010, including the fact:

- 13 per cent of residents now cycle to work, compared to 6.81 per cent 10 years ago
- 749 children and 415 adults took advantage of the Council's free cycle training
- 100 per cent of borough controlled residential roads are now covered by a 20mph speed limit

- 37 social housing estates now have cycle parking lockers and cages
- Nine cycle pit stops and Dr Bike events were held across the borough
- A new BMX track was opened in Haggerston Park
- Over 250 professional drivers received classroom cycle awareness training, with a further 162 undertaking practical on-road training.

Cllr Feryal Demirci, Cabinet Member for Neighbourhoods, said: "I'm thrilled the Council and London Cycling Campaign have again been recognised for Hackney's cycling achievements."

Car club membership a success

NEARLY 6,000 residents have joined a car club scheme since it was launched four years ago.

Members enjoy the convenience of being able to book a reliable vehicle for trips they cannot do by using public transport, cycling or walking.

Results of a survey conducted by CarPlus showed the scheme had resulted in changes in car ownership, pollution levels and the use of sustainable transport in Hackney. Some 20 per cent of local members said they had sold at least one vehicle since joining the scheme, with more than 950 cars or vans taken off the road in the borough.

Soul Sister

Until 5 May, Hackney Empire, 291 Mare Street, London E8 1EJ

THE woman who would one day become Tina Turner was born Anna Mae Bullock in 1939, when much of America was segregated and the Second World War had begun in Europe. It was during these turbulent years that Anna met the charismatic music producer, Izea (Ike) Turner, who took a shine to the timid girl with a booming voice and decided to give her a stage name – Tina.

'Soul Sister' follows the highs and lows, passions and heartbreak of Ike (Chris Tummings) and Tina Turner (Emi Wokama), set in the context of the Civil Rights movement in America. The musical charts the emergence of America as a more liberal society through to the 80s, which reflects Tina's transformation from a shy Baptist into an international pop star.

Emi's deep, velvety voice carried by the incredible on-stage six-piece band, transfixes the audience as soon as she sings her first tremulous note. From 60s Blues tracks such as 'A Fool in Love' and 'River Deep Mountain High' to 70s Disco classics including 'Proud Mary' and 'Honk Tonk Woman', the musical culminates in Tina's meteoric return as a solo artist in the 80s with anthems such as 'Show Some Respect' and 'What's Love Got To Do With It'. 'Soul Sister' has the whole audience dancing and singing in the aisles as if Tina herself is on stage. 'Soul Sister' is Simply the Best.

REVIEW*Sufjan Stevens, Bryce Dessner & Nico Muhly
9 April, at Barbican Hall, EC2Y 8DS

THE planets and musical genres collided this month with an original collaboration between three of New York's defining creative minds. Sufjan Stevens, Nico Muhly and Bryce Dessner may all be from the same city, but the trio took on the universe at the Barbican theatre with their unique song cycle entitled 'Planetarium', part of the venue's 2012 programme of world premieres. The evening opened with a delicate set of compositions for guitar and string quartet from the leading member of Brooklyn rock group, The National, Bryce Dessner. A spectacular ensemble of string quartet and seven-strong trombone collective then joined with Dessner on guitar, Stevens on vocals and acclaimed composer, Nico Muhly, on keyboard to perform the set which traversed classical, pop, electronica, rock and beyond. Despite this breadth, the collective succeeded in generating a sound that was diverse and harmonious and seemed to capture all the violence, grace, drama and awe of the solar system itself. 'Planetarium' as a musical event was quite literally, out of this world.

Rowing for gold

A STUDENT from Mossbourne Academy, E5, has been named as one of the country's best indoor rowers.

Sixth-former Kate Dampster won the Year 13 Girls National Junior Indoor Rowing Championships (NJIRC) at Lee Valley Athletic Centre. She triumphed by powering through 2,000m in seven minutes 23 seconds.

Fellow Mossbourne students Alex Lesurf and

Louis Zaidman picked up a silver and bronze respectively in the Year 12 boys' contest.

Mossbourne entered two teams, one for novices, and a second with members of its on-site rowing academy, set up to develop top level athletes. The academy team also came second in the boys' 6,780m relay race.

Clapton's Lea Valley Rowing Club were joint overall team winners, with Abingdon School from Oxfordshire, at the NJIRC.

Organised by London Youth Rowing, the championships saw nearly 2,500 youngsters from more than 300 schools and colleges across the UK battle it out on rowing machines.

Students from Horizon School, in Stoke Newington, took part in a category for pupils with special educational needs. Onyemehi Nwankwo-Alioma finished eighth out of 37. While Rolene Basuama came seventh out of 22 in the girls' competition.

Jack Thompson, teaching assistant at Horizon, said: "This was a new experience for most of our students and they all had a fantastic time. Some of our students are showing great potential, so this was a great way for them to experience elite competition."

News in brief

School volunteers wanted to raise awareness of abuse

CHILDLINE is looking for volunteers to help nine to 11-year-olds in the borough understand what abuse is and how to seek help.

The children's charity, alongside the National Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children (NSPCC), wants residents who could go into Hackney schools to deliver assemblies and interactive workshops.

Volunteers will get training to deliver presentations about abuse, including bullying.

Naomi Morris, 31, a Hackney-based counselling and psychology student, joined the ChildLine Schools Service programme in February. She said: "I wanted to get involved with something that had real meaning; something where I felt I was making a difference, and this is ideal."

"To know you are taking an active role in helping to protect children in your community is so rewarding. I really would encourage people to volunteer. Hopefully we can continue to raise awareness of the support available to those children affected by abuse."

NSPCC research found that while the majority of children that contact ChildLine are over 11-years-old, most of the children on the child protection register are under 11. Schools service volunteers must be 16 or over and ChildLine will provide training and support.

Students' top read co-written by borough pupils

Borough pupils choose their favourite book at the short novel awards

THE judges have spoken: Hackney young people's favourite book of the year was...actually devised by borough schoolchildren.

'Sam and Ruby's Olympic Adventure' was named winner of The Learning Trust's third annual short novel awards, which aim to increase pupils' engagement with books and raise the profile of reading. Year Seven pupils from Bridge Academy, Cardinal Pole Catholic School, Skinners' Academy and Stoke Newington School read four short listed books and gathered in Hackney Town Hall on 26 March for a day of discussion and presentations.

The winning book was written by Tony Bradman with the help of 30 local pupils, who assisted with the story and gave feedback on early drafts.

Tricia Okoruwa, Deputy Director of The Learning Trust, said: "Literacy has long been a focus for the Trust, because it has such a huge impact on a child's life chances. That's why events like this are so important."

The book's launch on 18 April formed part of the borough's celebrations to mark 100 days to go to the Olympic Games.

An inaugural event at the Dalston CLR James Library to commemorate the life of the man it is named after; writer Gary Younge (inset) gave a reading

Life and legacy of CLR James

GUARDIAN columnist Gary Younge delivered a lecture at an event commemorating the life of CLR James in the Dalston library which bears his name.

Over 150 people attended the first of what is set to be a series of annual lectures organised in memory of the writer and political activist.

Younge delivered a thoughtful speech and read extracts from selected works of CLR James, notably 'The Black “CLR James was an intellectual who lived his ideas and puts them into the service of the people”

Jacobins' and 'Notes On American Civilisation'.

Younge, who has been a fan of CLR James since his teens, said: "He was a brilliant, witty, clever writer, who made you feel smarter for reading his books, and who took you with him. CLR James was an intellectual who lived his ideas and put them into the service of the people."

Cllr Jonathan McShane, Cabinet Member for Health, Social Care and Culture, also attended the event.

He added: "We are delighted that Hackney's connection to CLR James will continue through the new Dalston library. This lecture, the first in a series of annual events along with the permanent exhibition, will bring his work and writings to new audiences."

Next year will mark the 75th anniversary of 'The Black Jacobins' and the 50th anniversary of CLR James's cricket classic 'Beyond A Boundary'.

The event took place on 27 March, and was organised by the Council, in collaboration with the Black and Ethnic Minority Arts (BEMA) Network, and his widow Selma James.

Dalston CLR James Library is now open. The state-of-the-art facility is one of the largest public libraries to open in the UK this year, and is twice the size of the library that it has replaced.

NHS staff awards

HACKNEY NHS staff have won two awards for making a difference to patient care.

East London NHS Foundation Trust held the awards ceremony on 27 March as a show of gratitude to its dedicated employees.

The borough's Assertive Outreach Team – which works with people who have severe mental health problems, often combined with substance misuse, won a Chief Executive's award.

Judges heard how the team help keep service users out of hospital, ensuring they do not relapse and also need less medication.

Occupational Therapy Assistant, Ricky Leslie, came runner-up in the employee of the year category. Judges heard how he uses innovative ways to help improve the physical wellbeing of mental health service users. This includes encouraging them to take part in cycling, badminton, swimming, canoeing and gym sessions at Hackney leisure centres, as he strongly believes sport is a means to social inclusion. He is also working with GPs to get exercise on prescription.

Dr Robert Dolan, the Trust's Chief Executive, said it was 'heart warming and humbling' to read through the nominations.

The Trust provides mental health services in Hackney, the City and Tower Hamlets, and mental health and community services in Newham.

News in brief

Tobacco products to be hidden

ALL large shops and supermarkets will have to hide tobacco products from view following the introduction of new legislation this month.

Shop owners are liable for a fine of up to £5,000, or face imprisonment, if found to be flouting the law.

The legislation was introduced by the Government to shield children from tobacco promotion and help people trying to quit smoking.

Figures show five per cent of 11 to 15-year-olds are regular smokers; more than 300,000 children under 16 try smoking each year; and 39 per cent of smokers claim that they were smoking regularly before the age of 16. More than eight million people in England smoke. It is one of the biggest preventable killers, causing more than 80,000 deaths each year.

Jo Butcher, programme director of health and well-being at the National Children's Bureau, said: "It's essential that we create a culture that promotes and protects public health, and tobacco legislation is a significant factor in making this happen."

"Cigarettes and all tobacco products will have to be out of sight except when staff are serving customers or carrying out other day-to-day tasks such as restocking." For help quitting, call: 0800 169 1943; or visit: www.smokefreecityandhackney.nhs.uk; or visit: smokers-clinic@qmul.ac.uk

Wider PCT to include borough

THE local primary care trust (PCT) is now part of a new organisation covering Hackney, the City, Barking, Dagenham, Havering, Newham, Redbridge, Tower Hamlets and Waltham Forest.

It is responsible for supporting the development of NHS clinical commissioning groups; developing GP, pharmacy, dentistry and optometry services; and public health.

The PCT has responsibility for purchasing health care on behalf of residents until next April, when that transfers to clinical commissioning groups, run by local GPs, under plans introduced by the Government.

PCT chair, Marie Gabriel, said: "We are working together across the PCT area to support clinicians, communities, and local authorities in improving the health of local people and in supporting NHS clinical commissioning groups as they take on responsibility for planning NHS health care." NHS North East London and the City brings together seven former PCTs, including NHS East London and the City, which covered Hackney, the City, Tower Hamlets and Newham. C and D for strong bones and teeth. The vitamins are suitable for vegetarians and free from milk, egg, gluten, soya and peanut residues.

Dr Lesley Mountford, director of public health for Hackney and the City, said: "It is recommended that mums or mums-to-be, as well as young children, should take a supplement containing specific vitamins to ensure they have the best start to life. Vitamins are essential nutrients that the body needs to work properly."

Confessions of a convict

GO into any library or bookshop and you'll find large sections devoted to crime, both fiction and non-fiction. Interest in the subject is nothing new – crime sells and always has done – as is shown by an extremely rare book held by Hackney Archives.

'A Select and Impartial Account of the Lives, Behaviour and Dying Words of the Most Remarkable Convicts from the Year 1700 Down to the Present Time' was printed by John Applebee in the mid 18th century. He had the right to publish the reports of the prison chaplain of Newgate gaol, known as the Ordinary, who was allowed to sell the confessions and 'last dying speeches' of prisoners on the morning after they had been hanged.

The book went through two editions, each consisting of two volumes, the first published in 1739 and reprinted the following year, followed by a 'corrected and enlarged' second edition in 1745. A delicate copy of the first volume of the rare 1740 edition is held by Hackney Archives, having once been part of the library amassed by John Robert Daniel-Tyssen (1805-1882), steward of the Lord of the Manor of Hackney.

Tyssen would have wanted a copy because it included accounts of the executions of two criminals with local connections. The first is 'The Behaviour, Confession, and Dying-words of John Estrick, condemned for felony and burglary'.

Estrick is described as having 'began, very

"I heartily beg God's pardon for all my sins, and ask you forgiveness for the damage I have done to you"

young, to addict himself to whoring and pilfering and began with robbing his own father'. He moved from Southwark to Hackney in around 1695, and went into the service of Thomas Glover from whom 'he did steal from him at several times, a plate to the value of 80L and falsely charged Susan Barnwel, then a servant maid of his master's with it'.

Estrick's confession and letters include a touching one to his wife, described as 'a most virtuous woman, who knew nothing of his former life'. He wrote: "I am just a going out of this sinful world, and my grief is, that I have so much abus'd so good and loving a wife, as you have been to me."

To his former master, Thomas Glover, he said: "Sir, I heartily beg God's pardon for all my sins, and ask your forgiveness for the damage I have done to you. But as I am a dying-man, Susan knows nothing of your plate, though I falsely accused her of it: And I beg of God to forgive me."

Estrick was hanged at Tyburn on 10 March, 1702. The second account is that of Joseph Still, convicted 'for a murder on 5 January 1716, near Newington Church, on the body of John Green, an honest servant to a worthy gentleman'.

Unlike Estrick, Still left no letters or regrets for his past crimes.

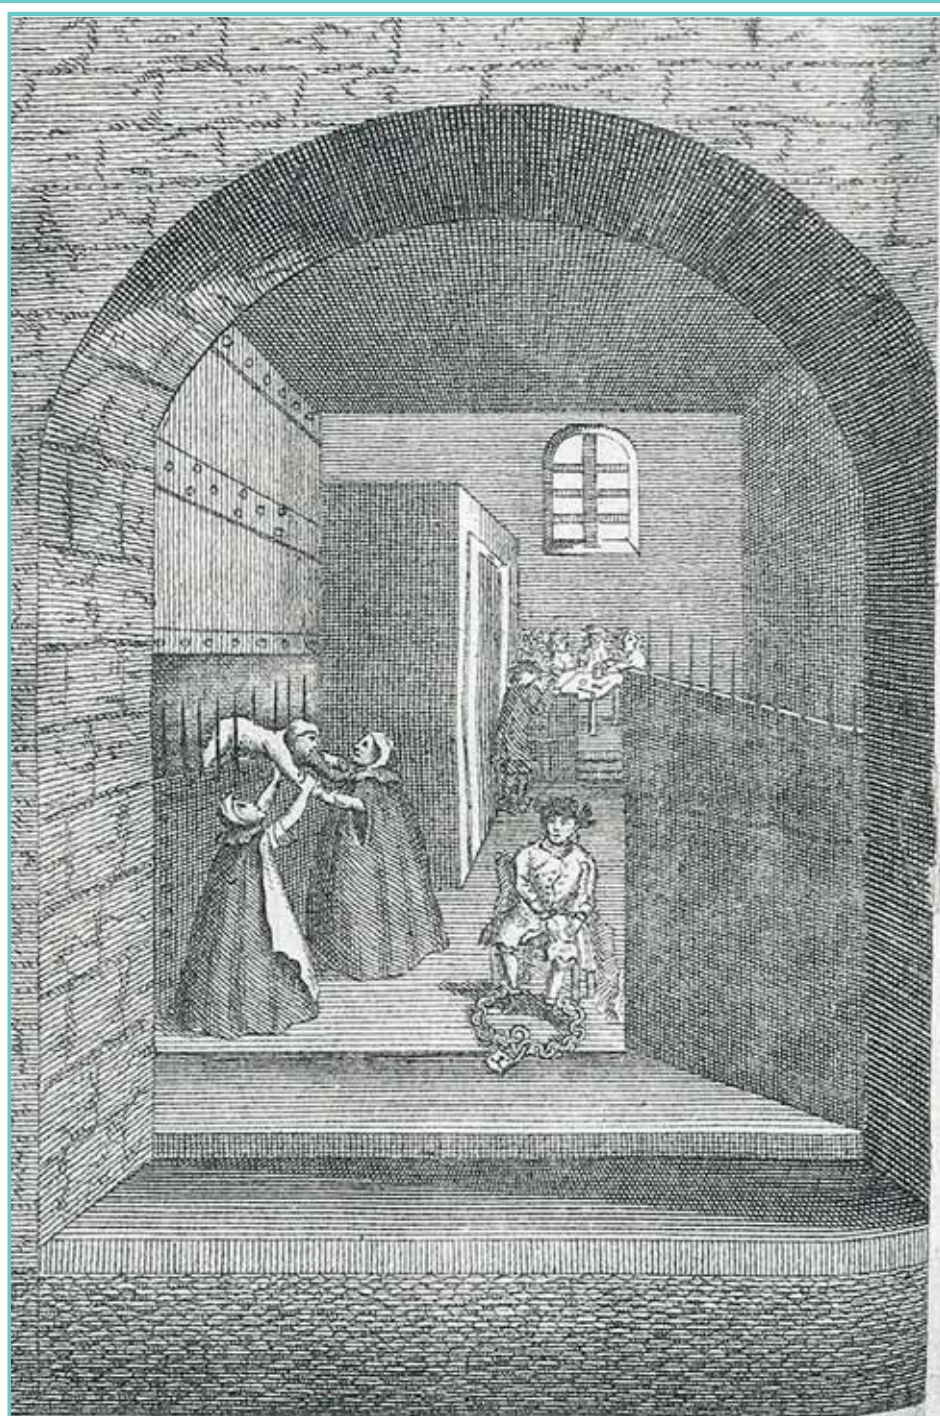

The Ordinary wrote: "He would not confess himself guilty of the murder for which he was condemn'd, saying he kill'd the man in his own defence, but when I ask'd him, what business he had to climb over the wall into a gentleman's garden, and then to make haste to run away; he could give no answer to that..."

"I still more and more press'd him to clear his conscience about these and other matters, and not die in the denial of his sins, in impenitence and hardness of heart; but all I could say did not appear to melt him into repentance, till he saw death making its closer approaches to him, then indeed he seem'd to relent a little..."

Still was 'hang'd on a gibbet erected for that purpose at Stamford-Hill' on 22 March 1716.

The Mayor and Councillors

Councillors are elected by Hackney residents and serve for four years. The last borough elections were in May 2010.

Councillors have a range of responsibilities, including helping to oversee the Council and its services.

They hold advice surgeries where residents can meet their local representative and ask them to take up issues that may be of concern.

Generally they can help with Council related matters, but if the issue is the responsibility of another person or organisation, councillors can often point people in the right direction and tell residents who they need to see.

Hackney has 57 councillors representing areas called wards – illustrated in the map opposite.

To check which councillor covers your area, or confirm surgery times, call: 020 8356 3373. More info: www.hackney.gov.uk/l-mayor-cabinet-councillors.htm

Recipes straight from the ovens at Waterhouse

www.waterhouserestaurant.co.uk

THIS is the latest in a series of regular recipes courtesy of Waterhouse – an eco-friendly restaurant alongside the Regent’s Canal in Shoreditch. Chef Lorren Joseph presents this classic dish. He says: “Cooking lasagne is a great way to start practicing kitchen skills and makes for a really satisfying family meal.” Visit Waterhouse on Orsman Road to try out the dish and explore some of the other dishes on the menu this month.

Lorren’s Lasagne

Makes 6

Preparation time
30 mins

Cooking time
1.5 hours

Ingredients

For the filling

- 1.5kg minced beef
- 3 carrots
- 3 onions
- 3 sticks of celery
- 4 cloves of garlic
- 1 to 2 chillies
- 3 to 4 tins of chopped tomatoes
- Mild cheddar cheese
- Bunch of fresh or dried parsley
- Bunch of fresh or dried thyme
- Pack of lasagne sheets.

For the white sauce

- 150g butter
- 150g flour
- 3 to 4 pints of milk.

Method

- With a little oil in the pan, fry the meat until it is brown all over. Drain the meat to remove excess oil
- Then add diced carrots, onions, garlic, celery, and chilli. Sweat the vegetables until nice and soft and then add to the meat
- Sweat everything off for 5 to 10 mins, then add the tinned tomatoes and herbs
- Let everything simmer on a medium heat for 20 to 30 mins
- While the meat and vegetables simmer, start making the white sauce. Gently melt butter in a pan, and when melted stir in the flour with a wooden spoon
- Slowly add your milk whilst stirring, then whisk until thick
- In a baking dish, layer lasagne sheets, meat and white sauce on top of each other. After 3 to 4 layers, finish with white sauce on top and sprinkle with grated cheese
- Put in a preheated oven at 180C for 40 to 50 mins.

Waterhouse is a social enterprise that trains local people in the ethos of eco-friendly best practice in the restaurant industry. Owned by Shoreditch Trust, its profits go back into a regeneration programme for the local area. Waterhouse in Orsman Road, N1, is now open six days a week.

Hackney

Get around more easily by planning ahead

This year brings the largest sporting events in the world to the UK – the Olympic and Paralympic Games. Because we're hosting these large events, you'd expect roads and public transport to be much busier than usual.

We will be working hard to host a great Games and keep London moving. The information in the map, on the previous page, will help you understand where the transport network will be busiest and how your journey could be affected.

The Olympic and Paralympic Route Networks (ORN/PRN)

This network of roads connecting venues, accommodation and transport hubs across London will be open to all general traffic. Some changes to these roads will be in place to ensure reliable journeys for athletes, officials, workers and media.

In Hackney, these changes will include closure of exits at the A12 Lea interchange and some restricted turns, for example Ruckholt Road into Homerton Road (signed diversion routes will be in place).

The ORN/PRN will operate from two days before until two days after the Olympic Games and similarly for the Paralympic Games. Vehicles that park or stop illegally on the ORN/PRN will be issued with a fine and could be taken to a vehicle pound.

Games Lanes

These clearly marked Lanes will be on about a third of the ORN/PRN and when operational they will not be open to general traffic. They will only be available for accredited vehicles and the adjacent lane will remain open to general traffic.

To avoid being issued with a penalty charge notice, motorists should not drive in Games Lanes when they are operational. They will be easily identifiable by clear markings on the Lanes and signs along the roadside.

In Hackney, Games Lanes will be on sections of the ORN/PRN along the A12 and Eastway.

Olympic Park

Changes to parking and local access around the Olympic Park will discourage spectators from parking in the area and help minimise disruption. There will be additional restrictions around the venue for security and operational reasons. Eastway will be closed from Lea interchange to Lee Conservancy Road. The event organiser, London 2012, is sending information to affected residents and businesses.

Spectator walking routes will be very busy before and after events.

Live Site at Victoria Park

Between 27 July and 12 August BT London Live Victoria Park will show the best coverage of the Olympic Games on two giant screens. Every day there will be a fantastic variety of music and cultural entertainment on offer and people of all ages can come and 'have a go' at Olympic and Paralympic events on sports courts.

Road events

Some Olympic and Paralympic events will take place on London's streets. Race routes and some surrounding roads will be closed to traffic on event days.

Although none of the road events will take place in Hackney, City Road, Old Street and Great Eastern Street will be used as an alternative route for athletes, officials, workers and media when road events take place on the ORN. These will take place on 28 and 29 July, 4, 5, 7, 11 and 12 August. Changes to the roads include longer parking and stopping restrictions when the route is in operation and some pedestrian crossing signals will be switched off. You can see the alternative ORN on the map.

Olympic Torch Relay

The Olympic Torch Relay will pass through Hackney on Saturday 21 July. There will be a rolling road closure as it travels through the borough.

Public transport

Some stations and lines will be particularly busy, including Old Street and Hackney Wick Overground. You can minimise disruption to your journey by avoiding these stations at the busiest times.

Some bus services will operate more frequently and there will also be some diversions. Detailed information will be available closer to the Games.
